SHOES FOR LIFE

Our feet give us mobility and freedom of movement, but what do we give back to our feet?

Our feet are the foundation of all our movement. They make us mobile and allow us to act on our natural urge to move around. If things go well, they do so for a lifetime. If things do not go so well, or rather if we are no longer able to walk well, our freedom of movement is restricted, as is our quality of life.

It is all the more important, therefore, that we do something good for our feet! For instance, we can treat them by offering relief from pressure and the stresses and strains they have to endure every day. Protection against pressure sores is extremely important, especially for people with polyneuropathy, because every minor injury represents a serious risk of inflammation given the limited sensation in the foot.

For people with rheumatism, the problem is exactly the opposite as they experience greater sensitivity and chronic joint pain. First and foremost, it is important to cushion shock loads and reduce movement pain in such cases.

With our three LucRo shoe collections, we hand back an important aspect of mobility to people with diabetes or rheumatism: quality of movement.

Our quality solutions effectively reduce pressure points and take into account individual requirements. Why not see for yourself?

Protecting your feet means taking responsibility – we are happy to accept this responsibility and do so with full commitment.

A risk that can be hard to notice

The poor metabolism of people with diabetes can lead to nerve irritation and damage in the long term. Diabetic foot syndrome is one of the possible associated conditions. Tingling, numbness and insensitivity to temperature on the feet can result in the failure to notice pressure sores and other injuries. Regular checks and protective footwear are indispensable in the fight against this creeping danger.

Special shoes for people with diabetes

Prevention is the best protection

Diabetic foot syndrome

Diabetic foot syndrome is a dreaded complication of diabetes mellitus. It is particularly insidious, appearing at a creeping pace that often goes unnoticed at first by those affected.

The reason for this is nerve damage, known as polyneuropathy among professionals, which manifests in approximately one third of people with diabetes over the long term. As a result, pressure sores and minor wounds on the foot are not noticed. If these wounds become inflamed and lead to ulcers, we talk about diabetic foot syndrome. This condition is difficult to control because the body's ability to heal wounds is reduced by the poor metabolism of people with diabetes in addition to circulatory disorders in the legs. The risk of new wounds increases, and treatment becomes increasingly difficult and more complex. In the worst cases, all that can be done is to amputate the affected area of the foot.

Not every person with diabetes suffers from secondary complications such as diabetic foot syndrome. Prevention plays a decisive role in this regard. People with the disease can take action against such an undesired associated condition: daily foot checks, perhaps with the help of relatives, and choosing the right footwear. These are two of the most important measures to reduce risk.

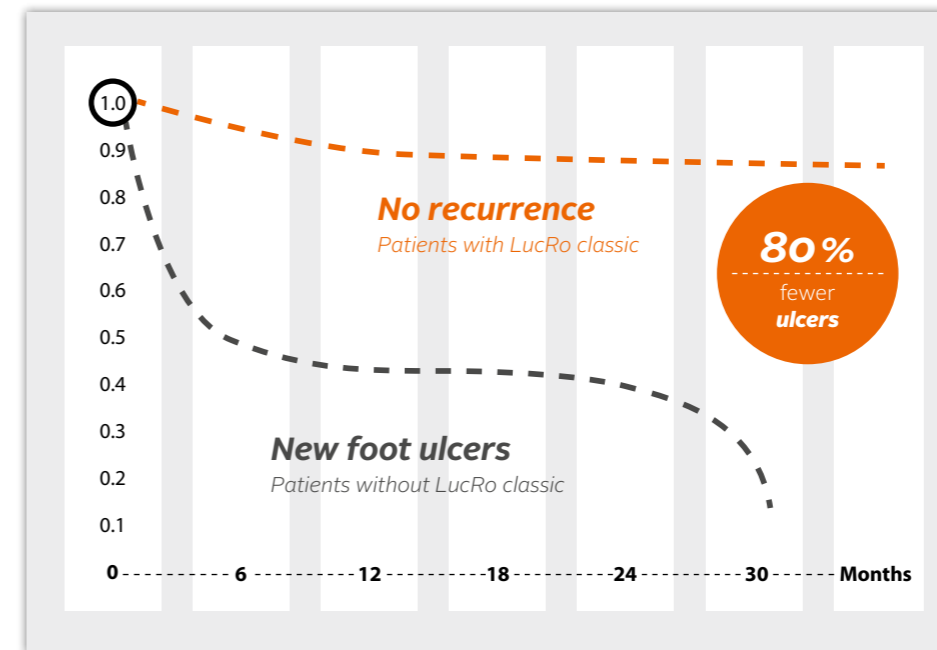

Daily foot checks and the right footwear reduce risk

Clinical evidence

The results of a clinical study carried out at Heinrich Heine University Düsseldorf are among the evidence that shows how suitable 'diabetic shoes' can contribute significantly to the prevention of foot ulcers and recurrent inflammation. For this study, the recurrence of foot ulcers among 92 high-risk patients with diabetes and a healed foot ulcer was observed over a period of 42 months. Some of the patients wore normal footwear while others used the LucRo classic special diabetes shoe.

The results indicated that the rate of ulcer recurrence in the first year was reduced by 80% among patients who wore LucRo classic.

Proportion of patients without ulcer recurrence ('event-free patients') over time according to the Kaplan-Meier method

- Fewer new wounds
- Many new wounds

Working together to find the right shoes

The foot experts

People with diabetic foot syndrome are not left on their own when it comes to choosing the right footwear. On the contrary, they are provided with support by various specialists whose common goal is to provide the best possible foot care. These include:

1. the doctor (GP or diabetes expert), who makes the diagnosis, examines the health of the feet and in some cases prescribes a shoe with an appropriate footbed for the condition.
2. the shoe manufacturer, who develops footwear that offers optimal protection based on current research and the results of clinical studies.
3. the orthopaedic (shoe) technician, who makes the optimal adjustments for each individual case.

DigiPED digital foot scanner

Pressure under the sole of the foot

Measurement of pressure distribution on the foot for an optimal shoe fitting

Distribution of peak pressure points

Equipment for measuring pressure makes it possible to analyse the dynamic distribution of pressure when people are standing, walking and running

Measurements

In addition to determining sensitivity of the feet, fitting the right shoe involves measuring the distribution of pressure on the foot. In many cases, peak pressure points encourage the development of plantar foot wounds. We make every effort to distribute pressure evenly under the sole of the foot to reduce pressure peaks. A straightforward observation of the soles of the feet in the standing position takes place using a podoscope or a digital scanning system. Electronic measurements optimise the quality of individual patient care: this approach provides simple, long-term documentation of assessments throughout the course of therapy.

Statutory health insurance companies require pressure measurements in the shoe when adapted footbeds are produced for patients with diabetes. This is the only way to provide proof that the aids reduce pressure.

Determining sensitivity of the feet

In addition to the daily visual inspections that those affected should perform either alone or with the help of a family member, regular visits to a specialist foot clinic are advised. The following diagnostic methods are tried and tested ways of examining sensitivity:

Tuning fork

- checks how sensitive peripheral nerves are to vibrations (one of the criteria of deep sensation)
- a defined scale can be used to quantify nerve deficiency

TipTherm

- checks how sensitive the foot is to temperature
- if there is no sensitivity to temperature, this is an important early symptom of the onset of polyneuropathy
- if this deficiency is discovered in time, precious time can be gained for prevention and treatment
- recommended standard for cyclical control

Monofilament

- checks superficial sensation
- if no pressure is felt, sensitivity to touch is already severely limited and no natural protective function remains

Our goal is your relief

- reducing amputations
- meeting the care needs of people with diabetes
- creating comfort
- protecting feet and maintaining mobility
- letting people enjoy life

Special shoes for people with diabetes

A great selection and one common goal

Maximum comfort and clinically proven foot protection

From traditional models and shoes with a narrower shape to designs with extra space in the toe area – regardless of their individual details, all three special shoe collections from LucRo share the same goal: to reduce pressure on the foot. Feet are given specific protection against sores, reducing the risk of amputation. The best thing about this protection is that you can't even see it. With the appearance of a modern outdoor shoe, the therapeutic benefits are packaged in what looks like everyday footwear.

LucRo classic protects against the recurrence of foot ulcers with a level of certainty approaching 80%.

This has been proven by a clinical study carried out over 42 months (see page 11 of the catalogue). However, LucRo classic has much more to offer than pressure relief and protection from recurrence.

Perfect all-round protection plus:

- a traditional anatomically shaped last
- a large and varied selection of models with 81 products

LucRo kinetic also offers perfect protection against recurrence, especially for more slender feet.

A key feature of the LucRo kinetic range is its modified fit. We have adapted the shape of the last in the heel area for a narrower and more slender rear foot. This gives the shoe a different look and provides optimal heel guidance, especially for those with a slim heel.

Perfect all-round protection plus:

- a last with a narrow, natural curve
- a large and varied selection of models with 50 products

An addition to the range: the new special shoe for people with rheumatism or diabetes that also offers perfect protection against recurrence.

The new LucRo ergonomic collection is also provided as a range of special shoes for rheumatism because each model effectively protects the joints and reduces pain. Like the other two lines from LucRo, it also offers the necessary criteria of protection for proper diabetic foot care.

Perfect all-round protection plus:

- a last with a natural shape
- a reinforced insole for optimal pressure distribution (must be glued in place for diabetic shoes!)
- a large and varied selection of models with 42 products

Anything but rare

The term 'rheumatism' covers many conditions, some of which are very different. The word itself is derived from Greek and means 'streaming pain', although sufferers experience a pulling, tearing sensation. This is exactly what the different forms of the disease have in common: rheumatism is almost always associated with pain and restricted mobility. In Germany, around a quarter of the population suffer from permanent disorders of the musculoskeletal system – one of which is rheumatism.

Special shoes for people with rheumatism or diabetes

Step away from pain, step into LucRo

Rheumatism – many faces, one goal of treatment: mobility and pain relief

The most common rheumatic conditions are degenerative diseases due to wear, especially arthritis. Then there are inflammatory joint diseases, such as rheumatoid arthritis, which are also among the main forms of rheumatic disease. Pain and restricted movement are what the various forms of rheumatism have in common. Just like their chronic course: those who are affected by a chronic inflammatory or degenerative disease of the musculoskeletal system usually suffer from it for life.

Typical signs of rheumatism include streaming pain and increased stiffness of the joints, usually on both sides of the body (e.g. in both ankles or knee joints)

Although no complete cure exists, people with rheumatism can still be helped to lead a life with as few symptoms as possible. There are many options in this regard. In addition to drug treatments and surgical procedures, there are other ways to relieve pain, promote movement and to restore quality of life:

- healthy eating,
- low-impact sports (swimming, cycling, tai chi)
- and choosing the right footwear

The right footwear

Reducing pressure and strain on the feet promotes pain-free mobility and has a relieving effect on all the joints of the musculoskeletal system.

Important criteria for the shoe properties are:

- the use of very soft materials
- a soft, shock-absorbent insole
- flattened heels on the sole to protect the foot

There are requirements that LucRo shoes meet with ease.

New well-being for people with rheumatism

- soft materials of the highest quality
- ample space inside the shoe
- good fit and optimal pressure relief

The new LucRo ergonomic adapts to the condition and type of pain

Rheumatism and diabetes have many faces and manifestations. In order to adapt the new LucRo ergonomic to the individual condition in the best possible way, a strengthening insole can be fitted inside or glued in place. For instance, temporary reinforcement is necessary for an acute attack of gout. The mobility of joints is paramount in the period between acute flare-ups of gout, and here it makes more sense to wear shoes without reinforcement. The situation is different for rheumatoid arthritis because the affected joint or joints should be immobilised.

There are no general care recommendations for rheumatism due to the different forms of the condition. Instead, the optimal footwear is determined based on medical indications and the doctor's advice.

Note: If a LucRo ergonomic model is used as a special shoe for diabetes, a reinforced insole must be glued in place.

Three choices – and a choice fit

The doctor or orthopaedic technician determines which of the three reinforced insoles best suits the patient with rheumatism or diabetes and whether these should be firmly glued in place or left loose in the shoe. The choices are:

Supralen RCH 500 reinforced insoles nude, 1 mm

Supralen RCH 500 reinforced insoles blue, 2 mm

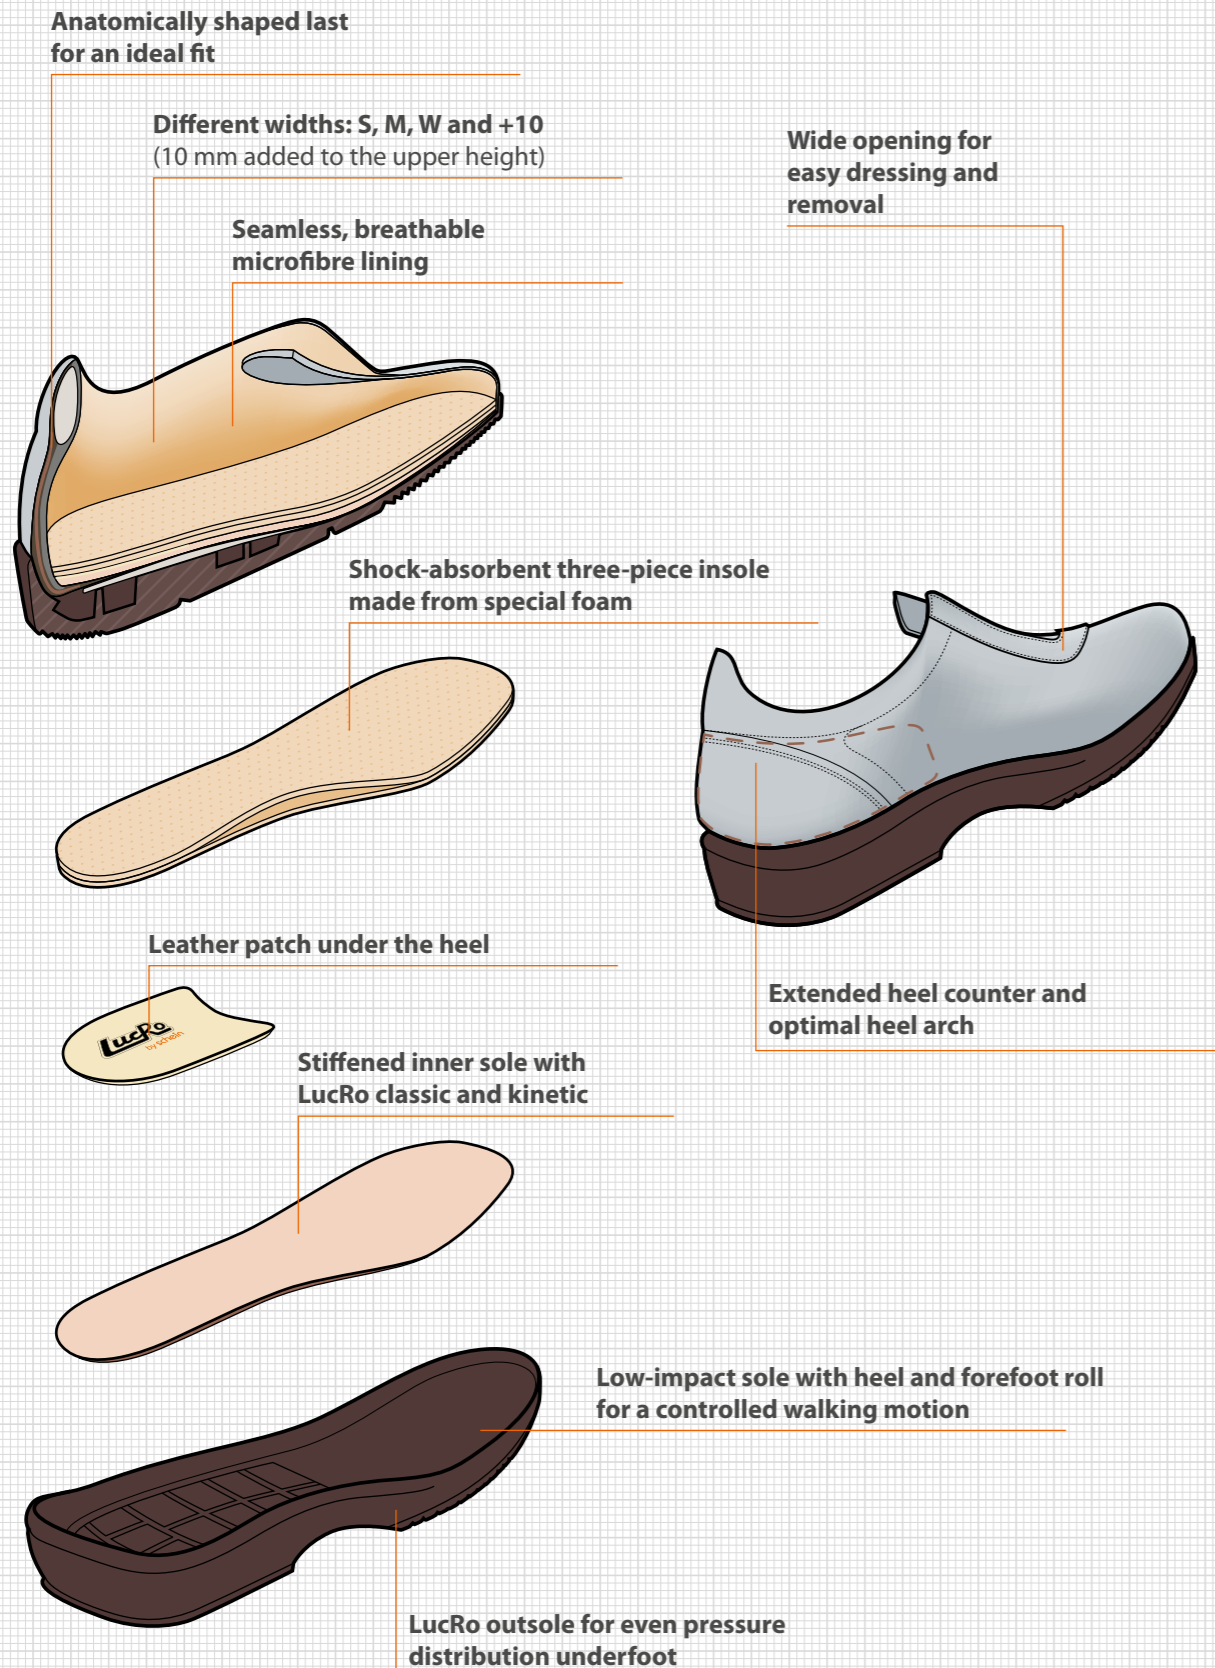

Supralen RCH 500 reinforced insoles red, 3 mm

Environmentally friendly leather

Sustainability every step of the way

The LucRo quality promise

Quality at LucRo is not simply reduced to footwear; it is a philosophy that underlies our entire company. Sustainability is extremely important to us. This applies to our own production processes as well as our choice of material suppliers. We only work with manufacturers who meet our high standards of quality workmanship and sustainable production.

Environmentally friendly leather production

Tanning agents are essential to make animal skin durable and to transform it into leather. In order to meet today's needs, most companies use chemically produced tanning agents. An important aspect of doing business in this regard is professional handling and compliance with environmental requirements. This applies to the tanning process as well as the disposal of chemical substances.

So that you can be confident of the highest quality at all times with LucRo, we only ever use leather materials that have been properly and sustainably produced.

LucRo leather – high-quality craftsmanship and sustainable production

The purely plant-based alternative

An alternative to the chemical tanning process is known as 'vegetable tanning'. For this, the only tanning agents used come from nature and include extracts from different kinds of wood or rhubarb, for instance. There are no artificial, synthetic additives at all. This is one of the healthiest possible methods for people and the environment. Furthermore, vegetable-tanned leather protects skin flora. Such a method is considerably more labour-intensive and time-consuming for the tanner. In many cases, the entire production process from animal hide to finished leather can take up to two years.

Vegetable tanning agents are also much more environmentally friendly when it comes to disposal. Any remains can be easily recycled and used as agricultural fertiliser – for a clean and safe environment.

The membrane is made of safe and recyclable polyether ester, which is completely environmentally friendly and kind to the skin.

As a responsible family company, producing footwear of exemplary quality it is a matter of course for us. Part of this includes an independent, external quality assessment – something we choose to undergo every year.

Our performance has been awarded with the TÜV Rheinland quality management certificate since 1997. This certifies that we work using systematic processes and that measures are in place to ensure production of high quality. We work exclusively with selected qualified suppliers.

LucRo care tips for a longer life

- Give your shoes a day off.
Allow them to recover from the strain they are under when you walk. By changing your LucRo shoes after wearing them for a day and giving them a 24-hour rest break, their service life will be increased many times over.
- Change footbeds regularly.
Due to the high strain they are placed under, these can lose their grip after some time.
- Use a shoehorn.
This will protect the extended heel counter and maintain optimal heel guidance.
- Do not place your shoes next to the radiator.
Instead, allow them to dry at room temperature. For additional protection from drying out, treat the leather regularly with a quality shoe cream or a nubuck cleaning block.
- Waterproofing protects.
Spray the upper material of your shoes before wearing them for the first time and at regular intervals with a moisture protection spray.
- Brush the leather regularly.
LucRo also provides all the brushes and shoe cream you need.

*Every foot is different, but the requirements are always the same:
protection and a perfect fit.*

LucRo kinetic

Walking without problems needs a perfect fit

The narrower special shoe for women and men with diabetes

LucRo kinetic is the narrower alternative for people with diabetes. This range also offers protective features for the therapeutic support of people with diabetic foot syndrome, but it has a more slender shape that is ideal for narrower feet.

Additional joint relief is provided by the special kineticBags in the rigid outsole. These absorb the strain under the centre of the heel and the ball of the foot.

narrower hindfoot

Stable heel guidance

Soft upper material

Anatomically shaped last with a narrow, natural curve

Shock-absorbent insole

Seamless, cushioned microfibre lining

Four different widths

Stiffened inner sole

Additional relief for joints with kineticBags in the otherwise rigid outsole

*Good news for people with rheumatism or diabetes:
more lightness in your step.*

LucRo ergonic

Be gentle to your joints while staying fully active – with LucRo ergonomic

The new special shoe for people with rheumatism or diabetes

The main goal of the new LucRo ergonomic range is to give back an important part of mobility to people with rheumatic pain and limited movement. The lightweight material takes pressure off the joints, while the spacious volume ensures maximum comfort. Moreover, it is possible to optimise each shoe by adapting it to individual requirements. Three types of reinforced insoles are available to choose from depending on the indication and form of the condition. If the reinforced insole is firmly glued in place, the LucRo ergonomic can also be used as a special shoe for people with diabetes. The pressure-relieving properties of this range are standard for every type of LucRo shoe – just like the modern, stylish appearance.
